A Member of Adventist Health System

Adventist Midwest Health is a network of not-for-profit hospitals and outpatient-based health care facilities in Chicago's western and southwestern suburbs plus a critical access hospital and skilled care nursing facility in central Wisconsin.

As a part of the Adventist Health System, Adventist Midwest Health brings a long tradition of health care to Illinois and Wisconsin. Our national network of 37 hospitals makes us part of the largest not-for-profit Protestant hospital system in the country. We take a holistic, "whole-person" approach to wellness, providing medical and spiritual support for our patients and their families.

AMH has a long history of service to, and involvement in, the communities we serve. Our nearly 5,000 employees in DuPage, Will and Western Cook Counties work in the neighborhoods they call home and make meeting your health care needs a top priority.

As part of the "Healing Ministry of Christ" mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, AMH is more than just a collection of hospitals and healthcare facilities. We are committed to partnering with our physicians and the community to promote wellness and provide whole-person care. We believe in fulfilling our mission: Keeping You Well.

- Our Clients and their Needs We Seek to Meet
- Patients: to restore health and prevent illness in a compassionate, spiritual environment
- Physicians: to provide a progressive environment for the interactive delivery of compassionate care with optimal outcomes
- Employees: to provide an empowered environment of communication and career development
- Families: to offer a comforting, communicating environment into which patient families are integrated
- Community: to be partners in creating community wellness and the stewardship of community resources

Community Benefit

In 2007, Adventist Midwest Health hospitals provided more than $79 million in community benefit; including more than $9 million in charity care and services to the communities we call home.

The very nature of our not-for-profit hospitals is to ensure that all residents have access to the most advanced health care treatments and services available, regardless of their ability to pay. This requires balancing a steadfast commitment to our mission while remaining stewards of valuable community assets that keep our communities healthy and whole.

Our charitable purpose, however, extends well beyond simply providing free and reduced care. Inherent in the Illinois Constitution, hospitals like Adventist Midwest Health partner with the State in fulfilling the inherently charitable mission of protecting the health and welfare of all people. This broad-based partnership reduces the burden on government and addresses the fundamental need of keeping communities healthy.

As a not-for-profit organization, Adventist Midwest Health does not generate profit for shareholders, nor do individuals profit from its operations. 100 percent of the net income (profit margin) generated by our hospitals is re-invested back into our programs and services, benefiting the patients and communities we serve. This includes covering the costs associated with the purchase of new equipment and technologies, plant and property improvement, working capital needs and repayment of long-term debt.
